

Nick and Allison have been running groups together for the past nine years, leading a range of courses including Grace and Chaos in 2007 and 2015-16, a year course entitled Practical Magic, and several Embodied-Relational Therapy trainings from 2007 to the present.

Nick Totton

I am a therapist and trainer with over 30 years experience. Originally a Reichian body therapist, I have explored widely in a number of therapy modalities, and now practice and teach Embodied-Relational Therapy and Wild Therapy. I have a grown up daughter. I have written several books, including Body Psychotherapy: An Introduction; Wild Therapy; Not A Tame Lion; Embodied Relating; and Press When Illuminated: New and Selected Poems. I live in Cornwall with my partner and grow vegetables. <http://www.nicktotton.net>.

Allison Priestman

I am an experienced Embodied-Relational Psychotherapist, supervisor and trainer, working in private practise in Stroud, Gloucestershire. I am a member of the training team for the post-graduate training in Embodied- Relational Therapy. My professional bodies are the European Association for Body Psychotherapy and Chiron Association for Body Psychotherapists. My aim is to create safe, stimulating and stretching training and supervisory learning environments.

Course structure

The course consists of five non-residential weekend workshops at the Spiral Centre, 2 Shelburne Road, Islington N7 6DL, London.

Venue

The Spiral Centre, www.spiralcentre.org, is a holistic therapy centre in Islington, London, offering counselling, psychotherapy and complementary therapy. The workshop will be in a large ground floor room with a breakout space and garden access. Teas, coffee and biscuits will be provided.

Dates and times

The workshops will take place on November 19-20 2016; Feb 25-26 2017; May 13-14 2017; July 8-9 2017; and October 7-8 2017. They will start at 10 am each day and end at 5 pm each Saturday and 4.30 pm each Sunday.

Cost

The course will cost £1250. This is payable as a deposit of £250 to secure a place, then £200 on or near each weekend. Some bursaries may be available, please ask.

Participants

There will be between eight and twelve group members. Most members will be practising therapists or counsellors, but we may make exceptions in particular circumstances; please contact us if you want to explore this.

Booking

To book or find out more please contact Nick, 01726 817620, nick@3-c.coop. If you haven't worked with either of us before you will need to arrange a chat with at least one of us: Nick as above, and Allison, 01453 731226, info@allisonpriestman.co.uk.

Embodied Relating The Ground of Psychotherapy

A one year course led by

Nick Totton and Allison Priestman

London

November 2016 to October
2017

Five weekend workshops

£1250

This course is based on Nick's book Embodied Relating: The Ground of Psychotherapy, and aims to give the ideas of the book a base in experience, and to apply them to clinical situations. It also draws on Allison's latest thinking and working with these and similar themes.

Truly integrating body psychotherapy with verbal work means recognising that our embodied perception is fundamental to all psychotherapy practice: it is the concrete experience from which we derive abstractions like 'transference', 'counter transference' and 'projection'.

Embodied relating is not an esoteric branch of neuroscience, nor an obscure psychotherapeutic theory, but something embedded in our everyday life: we can all 'do' embodied relating, though some do it better than others. Like many other important aspects of life, it generally happens of its own accord, but sometimes benefits from the sort of close examination which tends to happen in therapy. However, psychotherapy has a history of keeping embodiment out of its field of awareness, and preferring language-based relating to all other kinds - indeed, until quite recently, downplaying here-and-now relationship altogether. All these things are now changing; and this course is intended to be part of the change.

We believe that all relationship is initially between bodies: embodiment and relationship are inseparable, both in humans and in the practice of psychotherapy. If we explore embodiment, we encounter relationship; if we explore relationship, we encounter embodiment. Therapy is more powerful when the practitioner is able to recognise the constant interplay between these two aspects of being human, and to follow and support the shifts of charge from one to the other. This allows us to identify and process the many situations in which relational problems between therapist and client are best understood as issues of embodiment.

On the course we aim to bring participants back to the ground of embodiment, and to discover how we can work from our bodies without necessarily doing anything other than sitting in chairs and talking - although we certainly will be exploring other channels of relationship. This training is for body psychotherapists, verbal psychotherapists and counsellors, and other practitioners interested in developing an integrated approach to embodiment. It will include discussion, experiential work and supervision.

Structure of the course

Three of the five weekends will be led by Allison and Nick together, and the other two each led by one of us.

Weekend 1 (Nick and Allison)

Starting out from the experience of being a body - directly studying the whole complex, tangled relationship between the aspects of our experience which we call 'mind', 'body',

'thoughts', 'feelings', 'sensations'. Moving from here into exploring embodied relationship: how our early subjectivity is formed through the impact of the other, creating templates for forming later relationships (what we call 'embodied engrams').

Weekend two (Nick)

The wider context: how our embodied relating develops within and is shaped by the power relations operating in family and in society, and also by connections to the other-than-human environment.

Weekend three (Nick and Allison)

Tools for making sense of what our clients bring: thinking about trauma, both acute and chronic, and how it can trap people within limited patterns of embodied relating. Character theory both describes these patterns of limitation, and shows how they can transform creatively.

Weekend four (Allison)

Exploring the embodied relational engrams that each of us lives within and works from as a therapist: our habitual therapeutic position. Exploring working with erotic charge in the therapeutic relationship.

Weekend five (Nick and Allison)

Focusing on and celebrating the creative energy of embodied relating, and how this can be brought into therapy. Therapy as play, and as wild.

Integration and ending.
